

How difficult was to complete Step 1, 2 and 3?

- Honestly, I felt like it was much more difficult to complete steps 1 and 2 compared to step 3. I think the hardest part of a large assignment/project such as this is weighing a plethora of options that, as a group, you develop. With various directions we can take this project, I feel like coming up with an idea that satisfies everyone and is comprehensive for each member of the group is difficult. The goal is to come up with a project that can provide a role to every group member and with many options on how to do so, it's hard to satisfy everyone. Additionally, step 2 was also a little difficult. I think this part was slightly easier in comparison to step 1, but with a large project, creating a timeline/schedule that will work for everyone can pose a challenge. In the end, I think that the combination of steps 1 and 2 was crucial for everyone being on the same page for completing the third step. This was probably the easiest step because it is sort of mindless in a sense. But there are some cases where you decide to change parts of the project, but when a plan is already completed, all you have to do is follow it.

What was most useful about this experience?

- The most useful part of this experience was definitely the project management aspect of doing something like this. While not everyone will have the same experience while doing this project, I think that I personally stepped into more of a leadership role. I was the one who ended up taking the responsibility for leading our group through step 2 and delegating assignments and creating the timeline for this project. I think this position I was given and the role I undertook is very useful for my future career and throughout the rest of my college career.

Being able to guide a group project in any subject is very important and exemplifies leadership and communication skills.

Once you actually completed the assignment that you had designed, did it turn out the way you expected? Were your workplan and design clear and effective? What would you change?

- For the most part, this assignment turned out to be how we designed it and was pretty straightforward. I believe that the work plan and design was clear with the exception of our idea to create a story. I think this idea was a little ambitious and unnecessary for the project. It was difficult to come up with a comprehensive story that represented our design process for the escape room. We instead pivoted to more of a scavenger hunt-type escape room and created questions and puzzles that related to what we did in class and our discussions. I think this change in our design was much more clear and allowed us to be more creative with the types of features we could experiment with in our escape room.

However, because the design was initially confusing it did mess up the beginning of our workplan, but through revision we were able to make the workflow for each person straightforward.
